SUBJECT: MEDIA REACTION - NORTH-SOUTH KOREA CONFIDENCE
BUILDING MEASURES - TOKYO

LEAD STORIES: Most Friday morning papers gave top play to the hostage-taking incident in Aichi Prefecture, central Japan, in which a gunman shot two police officers and two of his children. One of the policemen has died and a woman is still being held hostage.

1. "Connection of Two Koreas by Rail: Reconciliation Alone Cannot Lead to North's Denuclearization" The top-circulation, moderate Yomiuri editorialized (5/18): "North and South Korea ran a train across the heavily militarized border Thursday for the first time in nearly 50 years. The ROK had strongly been promoting the reconnection of the two Koreas by rail as one of the projects to symbolize inter-Korea reconciliation since the ROK-DPRK summit in 2000. This trial run, however, does not mean that the reality of the military confrontation and mutual distrust between the two Koreas has ended. It remains unclear whether Seoul's proposal for a regular rail connection will be realized. It should be noted that the South is trying to resume economic support to the North, which was suspended following Pyongyang's test launches of ballistic missiles in July 2006.... Even though the April deadline has come and gone, North Korea has yet to implement the 'initial steps' for denuclearization on the grounds that its funds in a Macau bank, frozen under US sanctions, have not been returned.... The DPRK's failure to implement the initial steps also makes it uncertain whether it will carry out the 'next steps' agreed to at the six-party talks. Given the situation, there are concerns that financial aid from Seoul could further delay the North's denuclearization."
